POLICY ON ANABOLIC STEROIDS AND RELATED SUBSTANCES

-Use of Supplements-

Over the past several years, we have made a special effort to educate and warn players about the risks involved in the use of “nutritional supplements.” Despite these efforts, several players have been suspended even though their positive test result may have been due to the use of a supplement. Subject to your right of appeal, if you test positive or otherwise violate the Policy, you will be suspended. You and you alone are responsible for what goes into your body. Claiming that you used only legally available nutritional supplements will not help you in an appeal.

As the Policy clearly warns, supplements are not regulated or monitored by the government. This means that, even if they are bought over-the-counter from a known establishment, there is currently no way to be sure that they:

(a) contain the ingredients listed on the packaging;
(b) have not been tainted with prohibited substances; or
(c) have the properties or effects claimed by the manufacturer or salesperson.

Therefore, if you take these products, you do so AT YOUR OWN RISK! For your own health and success in the League, we strongly encourage you to avoid the use of supplements altogether, or at the very least to be extremely careful about what you choose to take.

Take care and good luck this season.

Sincerely,

HAROLD HENDERSON

National Football League

Gene Upshaw and representatives from the NFLPA along with Harold Henderson and representatives from the NFL Management Council recently met with me and a number of my colleagues to discuss dietary supplements and their interrelationship with the NFL Policy on Anabolic Steroids and Related Substances.

Upon the conclusion of the meeting all participants felt that I should advise you of both health and policy violation risks you may be faced with by adding over-the-counter supplements to your diet.

In 1994, the U.S government passed a law entitled “The Dietary Supplement Health and Education Act”. As a result of this law, the supplement manufacturers and distributors do not have to prove the effectiveness or the safety of their products. Also, the ingredients of the supplements are not checked by any independent agency, such as the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), to certify the contents of the supplements. Therefore, the effectiveness, side effects, risks and purity of many products you can buy at the health food store are unknown.

This law also permits over-the-counter sale of products that violate the NFL’s policy. For example, DHEA, a steroidal hormone that serves as a direct precursor for the synthesis of testosterone, is widely advertised. However, since this substance is found in some plants and animals, manufacturers currently are allowed to market it as a dietary supplement. This product, like many other supplements that contain substances that violate the policy, can be purchased at your local health food store and, when ingested, is no different than taking illegal anabolic steroids or related substances.

If you take supplements that contain a substance that violates the policy it will subject you to discipline. More importantly, you run the risk of harmful health effects associated with their use.

I will continue to provide you with information on the subject throughout the year. In the meantime, if you have any questions about supplements or the steroid policy, please contact me.
